If you're an OG ape that's read or done the DD, no need to watch your up to date. If you're a new ape and need a smoothed brain explanation, it might help.

Episode one: talks about the beginning of 08 through when Ryan Cohen bought shares in august 2020. It also explains terms used in the Reddit community.

Episode two: explains the build up from august 2020 to January 2021 to the chaos a few months after (events mixed around), Elon musks effect from tweeting, and the sentiment of the market participants (retail, HF, etc.), buy button shut off. Some history from financial collapses referenced.

Episode three: goes into who's to blame for the events. They go deep into DFV and blaming him (even the lawsuit he was going through, which I admit I didn't know of) which lead to the congress hearing. Explains payment for order flow. Robinhood and citadel involvement and all the fingerprinting afterwards. The fall of robinhoods ipo. Warning ■■■ amseee is introduced late in the episode.

Overall: if you're new, it's worth a watch to get caught up with events. It was very similar to Jon Stewart's 16 minute episode, without the identification of people. Honestly watch the Jon Stewart episode, catch up on the congressional hearing, and you're good.
