We've read that Icahn isn't a random investor. He's specifically taken down shorts before.

If a stock is clearly being squeezed, why would you start an initial short when it has shown 0 sign of slowing down yet. It was going haywire during the time it was bumping around 486 like Icahn bought at. It was going so crazy, that the actual highest sold price of 512 is rarely even recognised because the system was literally popping off.

No sane person would initiate a short in such an uncontrollable moment.

So why would someone who dislikes shorts, initiate an insane short like that.

It was a fucking trap from day 1.

'China is a sleeping dragon.'

Icahn is indeed
