Ryan Cohen tweeted awhile ago about Carl Icahn.

Everyone should watch his documentary on HBO. Icahn: The Restless Billionaire.

Icahn has the reputation of the Gordon Geko corporate raider, but really his goal was to buy undervalued companies and make them valuable. One of the things he was known for was going after executives that weren't looking out for the shareholders!

Specifically, there is a part in the documentary about his investment in Herbalife. Bill Ackman went short for a billion dollars on it at the same time. They end up yelling at each other on CNBC in the middle of the trading day. Icahn accuses him of "short and distort" and creating FUD.

Icahn ends up winning the trade. Ackman has to close his shorts eventually and took his biggest loss.

Icahn won, mostly, because people took his side of the trade.

RC tweeting about Icahn is very very bullish.

*I'm late with the connection because I just now watched the documentary.

Ryan Icahn is my chairman!
