All,

I removed all shares except my long term hodlings from Computershare as of Friday afternoon after many days of consideration and discussion with people I respect and who are willing to explain things to me. I don't want to push anyone in any direction, but I don't feel right about the ridiculous number of purple circles and mods not talking to me about why we need to keep doing this on every GME sub. My frens/family talk to me with respect, and we figure it out together. Always, even if we disagree. I've been here with you all for a long time. You know how careful I am. There are some things I like about CS, but overall, I'm not comfortable with the level of aggression and attacks when people question CS. Everyone else is either too aggressive or some random account I never saw. Real apes question and dig. That's what we fucking do. We dig until we've hit rock fucking bottom and then we dig under that. And I personally don't think we have hit the bottom of this particular well, yet. Something is missing. I can feel it in my fucking bones. I hope I am wrong, tbh.

If you would like to express concerns with CS, please do so below. A few people know way more than I do, and they've been too quiet for far too long. I've seen the arguments for Computershare, and some of them, I actually get and agree with, but the whole thing in retrospect feels off to me. I gotta do what's right for me, and I have ALWAYS been transparent about what I do and hold because I put my everything into this work, and I just can't stomach leaving those shares in CS. In the end, it feels like a coordinated campaign if I ever saw one and a lot of us, including myself, bought in. I'm out, but I respect those of you who stay in. Family. Is. Forever.

Here is one assessment I found very helpful:

PS: I have five shares of TWTR and I'm gonna sell them for more GME. The end. MORE GME! Woo hoo!!!
