Now to disclose, I own and DRSed "not-gamestop" and RC's "former" investment as of now but have been wanting to buy back into my savory GME (sold a while back due to emergency in 2021) and DRS them asap.

Now the question because y'all actually are more educated on this matter then the aforementioned stock and their respective subreddits.

Starting next month I plan on slowly buying $GME again, would it be wise to buy the shares through Fidelity (IEX) and then DRS them or would it be better to buy them through CS directly?

*Note: I'm kinda low on cash rn so if I could avoid the purchase fees of CS I would be able to buy more, but with that in mind, if the consensus it to buy through CS, I'll do it!

Thanks :)

Complete side note, since im new to CS, is there anyway to view a graph in CS of my total investments' value like in Fidelity?
