(I tried to post it on a different sub, but I still don't have enough karma...)

I've seen lots of TA posts popping up on S S, so I'd like to give it a shot myself. But this one isn't for hyping people. I'm not predicting what's gonna happen because I don't know what's gonna happen. What I do know is that if MO ASS is to happen, then there should be a precursor, which is GME has to break resistance.

As you can see on the daily chart, GME has lots of resistances. It has to break all the 10, 20, 50, 200 day moving averages, not to mention the two anchored VWAPs, which work as either support or resistance. Most people here probably know what horizontal resistance is, so I'm not gonna waste my breath here. But you might wonder what those dotted purple lines are. Those are anchored VWAPs. The thick one is anchored on Oct 10, 2020, when the most notable volume appeared, and the thin one is anchored on Jan 28, 2021. As you can see, GME was trapped in a channel from late May to early August. When it broke the $38.70 resistance and retested it, I was almost sure it was on. I even convinced my family members to buy GME asap. On Aug 16, I thought the launch had finally begun. Wrong! Of course, whoever shorted GME wouldn't just give up just like that. So from Aug 17 to up until now, GME has been pushed below all these resistances. Look how methodically GME has been shorted from Aug 17. This can't be normal or natural. Apes say price is fake. I have a different opinion. Price has a story. And it is saying someone has pushed the price down, and wants to keep it that way. But like the resurrection of Jesus, GME doesn't want to be cellar boxed, and I'll say if GME breaks the $30 level with volume, I think it is on again, and if it breaks the $50 level with "huge" volume, we know what is happening.

So until then, stay zen, keep hodling and DRS your shares.
