Low volume means it's not being traded. Shorts are afraid to short it, and longs aren't selling it. With the market on a downturn, it's surprising that shorts aren't piling in, but they likely can't find shares to trade. Likewise, the reason why there are so few shares available is because of how much the float is locked in DRS. The stock split was supposed to improve liquidity on the stock. The fact that volume is so low right now is bullish af.
