Honestly I know it sounds crazy, but how would the number get up to the hundreds of billions on a fake GameStop token, but not real shares? My suspicion is that if it was somehow placed as a buy and sell order simultaneously there is a chance it might have been the government. The SEC has admitted to taking part in some cry-o projects, and at 5-10% transit fees FTX would be looking at close to $10b for a bailout that the government wouldn't need to notify anyone about legally because cry-o are an unregulated industry...

More than likely nothing but a tin foil hat theory, but I believe it is something worth looking into if a transaction was actually made in that amount. It would be hiding a bailout for a Ponzi scheme in plain sight...
