After an initial pop on the news of Cohen's involvement, its share price sank back down, dipping below $5 in July. But in August, when Cohen had to redisclose his position in Bed Bath & Beyond owing to a change in the company's total amount of shares, the apes on Reddit interpreted it to mean Cohen had gone bullish again on the company — despite the fact that he hadn't traded any shares in months. The filings once again showed that Cohen owned far-out-of-the-money call options on Bed Bath & Beyond, essentially wagering that the stock would soar above $80. It was old news, but Bed Bath & Beyond stock jumped 70 percent following the disclosures.
