Perhaps his original intention for Twitter had been to short it. Ryan Cohen and Icahn move to secure it by Icahn buying into about 2% of the company and call Muskrat's bluff to leave him holding the bag because all of Icahn's shares are book.

Also could explain the standstill and what the Cohen and Icahn pic was trying to tell us.

What do you guys think?

Edit to add CFO skydiving is timely to this.

Musk then went into Twitter and started throwing a fit firing people knowing it hurt apes to see these people losing their jobs at the worst time.
