While we are about to hit the holidays and while many of us look forward to them, there are also apes out there who they aren't such a good time for. Maybe someone is spending their first holiday season without a loved one, or they're alone in a new city, They don't have the money to be able to enjoy the holidays, or they just get anxiety and depression around the holidays. If you fall into those later categories, please know that you are not alone. And get help. There are a lot of mental health resources and social service resources that are free. Hell, feel free to DM me. I'm just some poor guy on the internet that likes cats and mountain bikes but I'll talk to anybody or I'll help you do research and find out what resources are available to you. One thing I'll tell you I am thankful for, is all of the other folks on here who I've been able to enjoy this GME journey with. I hope nothing but the best for everyone.
