So 10 minutes ago 4:09PM CST there was an across the board hit on popular crypto currencies, with the exception of XRP/Ripple; which was also the exception in price movement this week (going up while most others trending down). Also, and correct me if I'm wrong, but it seems due to SEC investigation that XRP is still (as of 1/21) unavailable to retail market.

Q1: Is XRP/Ripple the chosen child of the elite for digital based currency system? The SEC investigation is the excuse for why it can no longer be traded - but is this really an excuse to box out retail.?

Q2: Seems to me in recent times cryptos have taken significant hits just before meme stonk run ups as hedgefunds sell off these assets to cover FTD's and we see price action. Could this 4:09PM blip be indicative of something beautiful coming Monday morning for GME or others.?
