So I'm posting here due to low karm(a) cause I'm more a lurker but here we go.

Superstonk mods are removing almost every unique post. I have been browsing new for nearly a year now and there is about a ten post difference between top, hot, and new now. mods now removing almost every post and using a team mod name which avoids accountability as to what mod is doing what. As a lurker of Reddit Superstonk has become the citadel. Now let me explain my view, i have watched as the Karm(a)requirements went up higher and higher to fight bots, the shilling of all ta posts, the attack on the dd creators-(which came from ta dummies), all the random hype posts, we used to encourage digging and random info because someone else might see something that was missed, I remember knights of new being a thing, now with the high requirements and such a curated feed it has become a echo chamber no different from CNBC or Cramer. We don't need citadel to silence us the mods have done it for them. superstonk was supposed to be a open forum for discussion. I would rather see shills and misinterpreted posts due to the mods not removing everything because the comments are how I learned to understand what was going on because people were willing to teach others. After seeing so much activity a year ago I thought Reddit was dead because there had been a lack of posts but it's high requirements to post and mods banning most posts that remain it seems. The internet wasn't meant to be curated it was meant to be free! The mods banning posts to curate feed is no different than hedgies controlling media and most likely he cause of all the posts about superstonk not popping up on home pages if posts are being removed
