Here's a disturbing - but not surprising - thing I heard this week. A reliable source told me that a Republican rep recently heard from his constituents - YOU all - about Gamestop. The people had concerns about shorting, PFOF and internalization, and all the craziness in markets.

The rep went to one of the most senior Rs in the House and said "my constituents care about fairness in markets, what can we do about that?" He was told to FORGET about it because of their donors: "you don't want to mess with these people. You don't know what you're wading into."
