We all know that GameStop is going to eventually do the thing...you know...M word... and that Wall St. and the DTCC basically committed securities fraud kicking the can down the road by treating it as a forward split instead of a dividend split. Movie stock was even worse, BTW...

Here's a hard question?

When the tax season rolls around, are you going to get a tax document for GME DIVIDEND or not? Will the entire market DEFRAUD the US GOVERNMENT by falsifying tax documents?

(I personally have watched my cost basis change ... I'm sure not going to have my accountant get in trouble with documents from ETrade that I know are incorrect?)
