With the recent events from PayPal trying to implement social credit and charging you up to $2500 for "misinformation". And then they got caught so they redacted their TOS saying oops that was a mistake. That was them actually testing the waters before the potential New World order they're trying to implement through the WEF. If that happens, our GME money is not safe because they can deem us socially unfit. So in light of this new development where would our money be safe after the squeeze.
