Hey guys wanted to discuss this question : why is GME price tanking ?

As we all know cheaper price means faster DRS, it seems strange that SHF are tanking the price down. Below a couple of ideas I am considering and I am sure your comments will be far more interesting ■

1. As the short player's collateral is going down, the algorithms are tanking GME to avoid margin call.

Extremely bullish scenario as it would mean price will stay in the lows and DRS would skyrocket meanwhile pressure on margins is increasing => explosive situation

The crypto crash triggered by Alamedas fall is bringing crypto to lower level and could alter SHF collateral significantly more than other indicators. That would be something unexpected changing their collateral balance.

2. SHF are capitalizing on retail panic due to crypto crash, to try one more time to shake some paper hands and buy back GME shares.

Volume is low but higher than the lows of last week meaning we could have some people selling shares (not many - so it does not change anything for our thesis) or liquidations going on.

I forgot the third idea I had so I hope many of you will comment and share their analysis
