Short positions on a company is a attack on the company and it's investors. And any attack should be transparent. And if it's not an attack and just a way to hedge on their positions. Then we have to ask shouldn't hedges and positions be transparent for company's and investors to better gauge the strength and sentiment of the market. Compared to a person going into pro athletics don't they go through vigorous test to make sure the body is healthy before they invest in him.
